BIOGRAPHY:

Americana rock band Cranford Hollow has received widespread acclaim in the Lowcountry of South Carolina and has steadily been gaining a following in the Southeastern U.S. over the past four years. While building this fan base in places like North Carolina, Georgia, and Tennessee, Cranford Hollow has also struck out to reach new markets in Colorado, New Mexico and Wisconsin.

After partnering with Denver-based booking agency Rocky Mountain Artists, Cranford Hollow launched their first national tour in December of 2013, promoting their self-titled album released two months previously.

Cranford Hollow returned to the West in the summer of 2014, selling out Fly me to the Moon with a raucous Fourth of July concert.

Cranford Hollow will be embarking on their fourth journey to the Mountain West this summer, beginning in Roanoke, Virginia June 17. The band will tour the west for the remainder of June & July, heading up to West Yellowstone, Montana for a show at the Wild West Saloon July 25. The band will be promoting their fourth studio album St. Telluride, which was recorded just outside of Telluride, Colorado and finished in St. Augustine, Florida.

PRESS:

"One of the standout shows of the winter from a first-time band in Telluride."

- Adam Smith

The Watch, Telluride, CO

"Cranford Hollow is the epitome of the working band, with a driving force that brings the Lowcountry life to a boil in a blaze of scratchy vocals and fiddle-drenched melodies."

-Joshua Peacock

Do Savannah, Savannah, GA

"The band had played three shows in three cities in 48 hours, but was somehow still friendly and functioning"

-Erin Shaw

The Island Packet, Hilton Head, S.C.
